THE GOOD SAMARITAN LAW

Kentucky's Good Samaritan Law /// KRS218A.133

The Good Samaritan Law was passed to encourage people to help their friends who have suffered from an overdose.

Before this law was passed, people would not call 911 to get medical help because of a fear of getting in legal trouble. The Good Samaritan counters this by granting "legal immunity" to someone who calls 911 for help, meaning they will not be arrested for having small amounts of drugs at the overdose scene. This law is in place because we value saving lives more than we value punishing drug use. The law encourages people to call 911 for help for their friend, and also to stay with their friend until help arrives.

The Good Samaritan Law does not excuse all criminal activity at a drug scene. It protects against small amounts. It does not extend to outstanding warrants, probation, or parole violations, or other non-drug related crimes.

Casey's Law

Casey's Law allows a family member or friend to get someone in addiction into a court-ordered treatment program. The purpose of the law is to help adults who cannot see their own need for treatment due to their impairment. To use the law, someone (the filer) files a petition to have the person in concern be ordered to rehab.

Basically, this law allows a relative or friend to step in and help, because being sent to rehab is better than being sent to prison or dying of an overdose.

The Process

The first step is to approach the local courthouse seeking to file a petition. In this petition, the filer must be prepared to explain in detail why they believe their concern is valid. There is a fee to submit the petition, but there are resources available to help cover the fee (see below). If the petition is accepted, then the person in concern will need to see two medical professionals, with the help of the filer. Each medical professional will evaluate the patient to determine they are indeed suffering from Substance Abuse Disorder and need treatment.

After being evaluated medically, the person in concern will appear in court to determine the course of treatment. Treatment can last from 60 days to a full year.

For more information or help filing, visit caseyslaw.org or call S.P.A.R.K. Ministries at (606) 344-4103.
